SM-178
Glen Mary Farm
Park Hall
Private

Circa 1790 - 1800

Glen Mary Farm is significant as an example of late eighteenth-century domestic architecture in St. Mary's County. Although the house has been enlarged with modern additions, the form and materials of these additions are generally sympathetic to the historic character of the main block. The well-preserved rural setting of the farm on the St. Mary's River strongly contributes to the significance of the property.

Originally known as Park Hall, Glen Mary Farm appears to be listed in the Federal Direct Tax of 1798 as the home of Mary Combs, measuring 26' by 28' and improved with five outbuildings. The house remained in the Combs family until the death of Col. Cornelius Combs in 1865. According to Fanny Combs Gough, it was during the ownership of Cornelius Combs that the name of the property was changed from Park Hall to Glen Mary. Mrs. Gough notes that when Lewis Cornelius Combs married Mary Elizabeth Coad, daughter of Colonel William Coad of Cherryfields, "She became such a favorite of Col. Combs that, as a compliment to her, the latter renamed the place Glen Mary." The name Glen Mary does not appear in the land records until 1910, however.

In 1934, Heath McClung Steele purchased the property. During Steele's ownership, the main house was doubled in size with the addition of a three-bay western wing and a one-story eastern kitchen wing. A series of 28 outbuildings were also erected on the property during the Steele occupation.

Glen Mary is located on the south side of Route 5 at the end of an unpaved lane known as Glen Mary Road near Park Hall in St. Mary's County, Maryland. The property on the south side of the house consists of a fenced horse pasture that slopes gently towards the St. Mary's River. A pool and poolhouse are located on the west side of the house. Tennis courts, an open lawn, and a fenced horse exercise field are located to the north of the house. A log cabin inhabited by the estate caretaker, a barn, and office also stand here. Most of the outbuildings, including two cottages, a chicken coop, a root cellar and three storage sheds flank the unpaved road that approaches Glen Mary from the east. The house faces south with the principal gable oriented on an east/west axis.

Glen Mary is comprised of a series of building periods. The earliest of these is the center one-and-a-half story, side passage, double pile plan structure which probably dates to the 1790s. A remodeling during the period 1825 - 1840 appears to have resulted in an enlargement of the structure and a reworking of the interior with Greek Revival finishes. This main block is supported by a continuous brick foundation and is sheathed with beaded weatherboard siding on the south elevation. The north side of the house is sheathed with plain weatherboards. The roof is covered with wood shingles. A shorter one-and-a-half story, frame dining room wing extends to the east of the main block. This wing has been reworked to such an extent that it is difficult to date. The dining room wing is supported by a continuous brick foundation and is stepped back from the main block. It is sheathed with plain weatherboards and is roofed with wood shingles. The roofline is finished with a boxed cornice. Around 1934 a one-and-a-half story wing, nearly identical to the main block, was added to the west for owner Heath McClung Steele. This wing is supported by a continuous brick foundation and is roofed with wood shingles. It is sheathed with plain weatherboard siding on the south and with wood shingles on the north. To the east of the main block's dining room wing is a one-story, frame, kitchen addition constructed in 1934. The kitchen wing is supported by a brick foundation, is sheathed with wood shingles, and is roofed with wood shingles. The roofline is finished with a boxed cornice.

The south (main) elevation of the main block is pierced by a modern entrance door with a three-light transom flanked by two one-over-one sash windows to the east. The roof is pierced by three gable roof dormers with six-over-six sash windows. To the west, the 1934 wing is pierced by three one-over-one sash windows on the first floor. A shed roof porch supported by square posts extends across the full width of the first floor of the main block and west wing. The porch floor is laid brick and the ceiling is wainscoted. The roof of the west wing is pierced by three dormer windows with six-over-six sash windows. The shorter one-and-a-half story dining room wing located Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

Glen Mary Farm is significant as an example of late eighteenth-century domestic architecture in St. Mary's County. Although the house has been enlarged with modern additions, the form and materials of these additions are generally sympathetic to the historic character of the main block. The well-preserved rural setting of the farm on the St. Mary's River strongly contributes to the significance of the property.

The complex now known as Glen Mary Farm stands on property that was part of "Gerrard's Freehold" in the seventeenth century. In 1663 it was patented as "Pork (Park) Hall Neck or Freehold" to Jerome White. From White the property passed to the family of Richard Moy, and from Richard Moy II to Cornelius Manning, Jr., in 1720. Mary Manning Mills later inherited the property and, by her marriage to Enoch Combs, brought the tract into the Combs family. From Enoch and Mary Combs, the land passed to their son Ignatius. At his death in 1790, Ignatius Combs devised "the home land, Park Hall Freehold" to his son Enoch.

The Federal Direct Tax of 1798 lists the property of both Enoch Combs and Mary Combs, widow of Ignatius Combs. Based on the property descriptions, it seems likely that the house occupied by Mary Combs in 1798 is Glen Mary Farm. The description notes that the house measures 26' by 28' and is pierced by eight windows. Two kitchens measuring 20' by 12' are located on the property at this time and one kitchen is enlarged with the addition of a 10' shed. There are also two meathouses, one measuring 12' by 8' and the other 8' by 8', and one cellar house measuring 16' by 16'.

In 1825, Enoch Combs transferred 320 acres of "Park Hall" to Cornelius Combs for $4500. According to Fanny Combs Gough, it was during the ownership of Cornelius Combs that the name of the property was changed to Glen Mary. Mrs. Gough notes that when Lewis Cornelius Combs married Mary Elizabeth Coad, daughter of Colonel William Coad of Cherryfields, "She became such a favorite of Col. Combs that, as a compliment to her, the latter renamed the place Glen Mary." The

SM-178, Glen Mary Farm
St. Mary's County
7.1 Description

east of the main block is pierced by three two-light windows and a vertical panel door with a leaded glass light, all of which have wide, plain surrounds. A gable roof dormer pierced by a four-light window projects from the roof. An interior brick chimney pierces the roof ridgeline. The one-story kitchen wing is pierced by two pairs of two-light windows. A gable roof dormer lighted by a four-light window projects from the roof.

The east elevation of the main block is a 5/1 bond brick gable end. A metal plaque on the first floor reads "Glen Mary, Restored 1934-1937, Heath Steele." A pair of chimneys project above the roofline of the building. A portion of a shed roof chimney pent is visible on the first floor. The remainder of the pent has been covered by the dining room wing. The second floor is pierced by two six-over-six sash windows with wide surrounds on the second floor. One four-over-four sash window lights the upper half story of the building. A change in the coloration of the brick just below the second floor windows suggests that a portion of this gable end may have been rebuilt at one time. The east elevation of the dining room wing is a flush gable end. The kitchen wing is pierced by two two-light windows and an entrance door. The door is sheltered by a shed roof portico. An exterior brick chimney stands against this gable end.

The north elevation of the kitchen wing is blind. The dining room wing is pierced on the first floor by a vertical panel door fitted with a leaded glass light, a six-over-six sash window, and a two-light window. Both windows are fitted with window boxes. The roof is pierced by a gable roof dormer with a four-light window. The main block is pierced by two nine-over-nine sash windows and a modern door with a three-light transom. The windows are fitted with window boxes. The roofline is pierced by two gable roof dormers lighted by six-over-six sash windows. The west wing is pierced by one nine-over-nine sash window, two pairs of four-light windows, and a modern door. Most of the first floor of this wing is covered by an enclosed one-story, shed roof addition. This room is known as the pool room. Three gable roof dormer windows lighted by six-over-six sash windows pierce the roofline.

The west elevation is a brick gable end with a 5/1 bond and recessed mortar joints. Like the east end of the house, this elevation consists of two large chimneys with a shed roof pent between them. The pent is fitted with a pair of vertical panel doors hung with decorative Arts and Crafts style strap hinges. The first floor is pierced by two nine-over-nine sash windows with wide plain surrounds and window boxes. The second floor is pierced by two six-over-six sash windows with wide surrounds. The upper half story is fitted with a four-over-four sash window.

The interior of the main block consists of a spacious side passage that measures 11'6" in width. The passage is finished with a plain baseboard surmounted by a single bead and a molded chair rail. The stair is located in the northwest corner of the passage. A two-panel door with an interior beaded surround opens to a closet underneath the stair. The stair consists of four winders and an open string case decorated with scalloped brackets. The stair has rectangular balusters, a square newell post, and a handrail finished with a reeded molding. The newell post and handrail appear to be attached with T-head nails. Eight-panel doors open off of the passage into the north and south parlors. The south parlor is finished with a reverse ogee cornice. The mantel here consists of reeded pilasters on plain blocks and a five-part frieze. The two end panels and the central panel of the frieze are reeded. The mantle shelf is very shallow. A pair of six-panel double doors hung on "Baldwin Patent" hinges separate the south parlor from the north parlor. The double doors are framed by symmetrically molded trim with corner blocks. The south parlor walls are covered with modern paneling and the ceiling joists and top plates are exposed. Pegged mortise and tenon joints between the studs and the top plate are visible here. A plain mantle is located against the east wall. A vertical panel door hung on Arts and Crafts style hinges opens from the south parlor into the dining room on the north side of the fireplace. A small, four-panel door located south of the fireplace may have originally opened into the chimney pent. It now provides access into the dining room as well.

The second floor of the main block consists of a central hall and three bedrooms located behind six-panel doors. The northeast bedroom is fitted with a beaded chair rail and a fireplace on the east wall. The mantle is relatively plain, decorated with four beaded bands in the center of the frieze. The southeast bedroom is the largest of the three bedrooms here. It is also fitted with a chair rail and a fireplace mantle more elaborate than that of the northeast bedroom. The original west exterior brick gable end wall is visible here. Two six-over-six sash windows remain embedded in the wall. A doorway to the south of the windows provides access to the second floor of the 1934 addition. A narrow, open string stair located in the northeast corner of the second floor hall provides access to the upper half story. The door to a small closet located underneath the stair is hung on butterfly hinges.

The upper half story consists of two rooms. The east room is located behind a four-panel door hung on H-L hinges. The former exterior wall of the west room is pierced by a window opening. The west side of that wall is sheathed with plain weatherboard siding.

The dining room wing has been completely reworked. The floor of the upper half story has been removed to create a more dramatic one-and-a-half story ceiling height.

St. Mary's County
8.5 Significance

name Glen Mary does not appear in the land records until 1910, however.

In 1865, Col. Cornelius Combs devised his property to his nephew Lewis Cornelius Combs. Due to a heavily indebted estate, the Glen Mary property did not pass to Lewis Cornelius Combs, but was sold at auction. An advertisement for 220 acres of Park Hall in the St. Mary's Beacon of September 2, 1869 describes the property as, "beautifully located on St. Mary's River at a point where it is navigable for steamboats, there having been before the war a wharf and steamboat landing there and where one could be profitably made again. The improvements on this place are excellent being a fine dwelling house and every necessary outbuilding. The farm itself is productive and in good condition."

John F. Gardiner purchased 261 acres of "Park Hall" or "Part of Park Hall" in 1872. The property then passed through a series of families until Heath McClung Steele, president of American Metals Climax, purchased the property in 1934. At the time of Steele's purchase, the property was improved with the main dwelling, a corn crib, a tobacco barn, and a tenant house. At that time the house consisted of a side hall, double-pile plan with three bedrooms on the second floor and a one-and-a-half story wing attached to the east end of the house. The wing consisted of a dining room and root cellar on the first floor. During Steele's ownership, the main house was doubled in size with the addition of a three-bay western wing and a one-story eastern kitchen wing. A series of 28 outbuildings were also erected on the property during this time.
